A student must be a United States citizen or eligible noncitizen to receive federal student aid as determined by the Department of Education. If your citizenship status could not be confirmed when your FAFSA was processed, the university is required to verify your eligibility by reviewing original documentation of your proof of citizenship, or proof of eligible noncitizen status. Please bring original documentation of citizenship status to our office at your earliest convenience.

If due to extenuating circumstances you are unable to provide original documentation, please submit a copy of your documentation along with this notarized form and explanation as to why you are unable to submit original documents. This information must be received and approved before a financial aid award will be processed.

You may want to contact the Social Security Administration to make sure that your citizenship status is correct in their database. You may also review the information that you reported on the FAFSA.
